In some cases, you may want to organize your maps into folders or collections. This can help group maps together that are for the same area or use (e.g. hiking maps for a state park). Once you have your folder or collection created, moving maps around can be done in a couple of short steps using what's called the "Long Press Context Menu".

Long Press Context Menu

This context menu allows you to access many edit features for maps, folders/collections, and layers. It can be accessed in multiple spots and is considered a native function of Android operating systems. In order to move maps around, you will access this menu from the My Maps screen by performing a long press on a map, folder or collection to select it. Once in selection mode, you can select additional map list items. Selected maps are highlighted. A few contextual options appear to manage map list items.

1. Move to Folder/Collection - Tap the Move to folder icon to move selected maps to another folder.
2. Map information - Select maps, folders or collections, then tap the Information icon. You can rename maps or folders in the Title field. Map details consist of metadata including publisher, description, publish date, and projection information.

A. Create a Collection folder and name it Central Oregon SXS Maps.

B. Open the folder and LEAVE IT OPEN.

C. Tap the Orange Circle  and then tap "Download or import map (down arrow)."

A. Upper right hand corner tap on the QR code sign  (upper right), and scan the maps that you want.
